

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

VICTOR HUGO ESPARZA,

Petitioner,

v.

J. SCHOMIG, Warden, et al.

Respondents.

Case No. 09-CV-01974-L (JMA)

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION
DENYING PETITION FOR WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS

I. INTRODUCTION

Petitioner Victor Hugo Esparza ("Esparza" or "Petitioner") is a California state prisoner proceeding pro se with a Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2254. He was convicted by a jury in San Diego Superior Court, case number SCD 198501, of two counts of making a criminal threat (with gang enhancements on each), two counts of resisting an executive officer (with gang enhancements on each), possession of ammunition or a firearm by a person prohibited from possessing ammunition or a firearm, possession of paraphernalia used for narcotics, and possession of 28.5 grams or less of marijuana. (Lodgment No. 2, Vol. IV at 333-36.) Petitioner asserts his incarceration is unlawful because (1) a motion to suppress evidence at trial was improperly denied, violating his Fourth Amendment right to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures, (2) his adoptive admissions were admitted as evidence violating his Fifth and Fourteenth Amendment right to remain silent, and (3) an expert testified as to the ultimate issue concerning the gang enhancements in violation of his right to due process under the Fourteenth Amendment. (First Am. Pet., Doc. No. 5, 6-8.) After reviewing the Petition, Respondent's Answer and Memorandum of Points and Authorities, Petitioner's Traverse, and the exhibits lodged with the Court, the undersigned recommends that the Petition be DENIED for the reasons stated below.

II. PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

On September 12, 2006, a San Diego County jury convicted Petitioner of two counts of making criminal threats (Cal. Penal Code § 422), two counts of resisting an executive officer (Cal. Penal Code § 69), possession of ammunition (Cal. Penal Code § 12316(b)(1)), possession of drug paraphernalia (Cal. Health & Safety Code § 11364), and possession of marijuana (Cal. Health & Safety Code § 11357(b)). (Lodgment No. 1 at 88-94.) The jury found that as to the counts of making criminal threats and resisting an executive officer, Petitioner was acting for the benefit of, at the direction of, and in association with a criminal street gang within the meaning of California Penal Code section 186.22(b)(1). (Id. at 88-91.) Esparza also admitted that he had been convicted of a prior serious felony, and had a "strike" under California law. (Lodgment No. 2, Vol. IV at 340-41.) On November 16, 2006, the trial court sentenced Petitioner to a total of fourteen years in the custody of the California Department of Corrections – nine years for the first count of making criminal threats (two years doubled because of the prior strike, plus five years for the gang enhancement pursuant to Cal. Penal Code section 186.22(b)(1)), nine years to be served concurrently on the second count of making criminal threats, four years to be served concurrently on the count of possession of ammunition, six months to be served concurrently on the count of possession of drug paraphernalia, nine years for each of the counts of resisting an executive officer, stayed

1 pursuant to Cal. Penal Code section 654 (two years doubled, plus the five year gang
2 enhancement for each count) and five years to be served consecutively for a prior 3 conviction enhancement pursuant to Cal. Penal Code section 667(a)(1)). (Id. Vol. V at 4 354-55; Lodgment No. 1 at 132.)

5 Petitioner filed an appeal of his conviction, sentence, and denial of motion to 6 suppress in the California Court of Appeal on July 9, 2007. (Lodgment No. 3.) The 7 Court of Appeal affirmed the conviction, sentence, and the trial court's decision to deny
8 the motion to suppress on March 25, 2008. (Lodgment No. 5.) Esparza filed a petition
9 for review of the Court of Appeal's decision in the California Supreme Court on May 6, 10 2008. (Lodgment No. 6.) The California Supreme Court summarily denied the petition
11 for review on July 9, 2008. (Lodgment No. 7.)

12 On September 8, 2009, Petitioner filed a Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus (Pet., 13 Doc. No. 1) followed, on October 30, 2009, by a First Amended Petition for Writ of 14 Habeas Corpus alleging three claims. (First Am. Pet., Doc No. 5.) In Ground One, 15 Petitioner asserts that the trial court erred when it denied his motion to suppress 16 evidence seized from his home because the evidence was seized pursuant to an 17 unlawful arrest and therefore the evidence seized was "tainted fruit of this illegal arrest"
18 under the Fourth Amendment's prohibition of unreasonable searches and seizures.
19 (First Am. Pet. at 6.) In Ground Two, Petitioner claims that the trial court abused its 20 discretion when it instructed the jury that it "could consider [P]etitioner's failure to deny 21 the police's [sic] accusations as an adoptive admission" in violation of his Fifth 22 Amendment right to remain silent. (Id. at 7.) In Ground Three, Petitioner asserts that 23 his right to due process under the Fourteenth Amendment was violated when the trial
24 court allowed a gang expert to testify "that the threats in this case were . . . absolutely 25 made to promote, assist, and further the criminal conduct by gang members[]," because 26 the expert testified as to the ultimate issue concerning the gang enhancements to 27 Petitioner's sentence. (Id. at 8.)

28 Respondent filed an Answer to Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus and a Memorandum of Points and Authorities on February 9, 2010. (Answer, Doc. No. 11; Answer Mem. in Supp. (hereafter “Resp’t Mem.”), Doc. No. 11-1.) Petitioner filed a Traverse to the Answer on March 16, 2010. (Traverse, Doc. No. 14.) Petitioner then filed an Amended Traverse, received nunc pro tunc, on April 14, 2010. (First Am. Traverse, Doc. No. 15.)

III. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The following statement of facts is taken from the appellate court opinion affirming Petitioner’s conviction on direct review. This Court gives deference to state court findings of fact and presumes them to be correct. 28 U.S.C. §2254(e); see also Sumner v. Mata, 449 U.S. 539, 545-47 (1981) (stating that deference is owed to factual findings of both state trial and appellate courts).

On April 15, 2006, Christopher Morris, a parole agent for the Department of Corrections, received two threatening voicemail messages on his cell phone from a phone with a blocked phone number. The [first] voicemail message[] stated:

[]How ya doin’? This is Devil, OTNC home boy. ‘Member me? I’m the one calling the shots now, bro. Now check this out. Ya’ll been fucking up. Getting tired of it, I don’t know what to do. Either kill you mother fuckers or just fuck y’all up. Y’all watch out. I’m gonna come get you Mr. Morris. You ain’t shit and your homeboys ain’t shit and ya’ll with badges ain’t shit. This is Devil, OBS Big Devil, OTNC, thirteen ese.

[The second voicemail message stated:]

[]How ya doin’? Check this shit out. (unintelligible) y’all mother fuckers wanna discriminate, stereotype, and label us, and use it against us. Well, you fucking around, I’m gonna start taking one by one out. You understand? You either get back or you get the fuck shot back.[]

From an examination of phone records, the police were able to ascertain a cell phone number from which the calls to Agent Morris had been made, but not the phone subscriber because the caller used a “pay-as-you-go” service. Examining the content of the voicemail messages, the authorities determined the reference to “OTNC” was to the Old Town National City gang; the reference to “OBS” was to Olden Boys, a faction of the OTNC gang; and the reference to “Devil” was to the caller’s gang moniker. Police investigation identified Esparza as the only OTNC gang member who used the moniker “Devil.” Agent Morris had been Esparza’s parole agent from 2003 to 2005, and Agent Morris had given Esparza his cell phone number.

On April 21, 2006, the police arrested Esparza in front of his residence. The police obtained authorization to search the residence first from Esparza's consent, and then[,] after he withdrew his consent, [they obtained authorization] from a search warrant. During the search of his residence, the police observed graffiti saying "OTNC" and "Devil," and a cell phone laying on a bed. The cell phone on the bed was identified as the phone used by the caller to leave the threatening voice mail messages. Additionally, the police found a piece of paper upon which was written the word "Puerco" (meaning "pig" in Spanish), Agent Morris's cell phone number, and the scratched-out words "Mr. and Mrs. Morris and family, all parole officers." The police also found ammunition, a methamphetamine pipe, and marijuana.

Esparza was interviewed by the police after waiving his Miranda rights.<sup>1</sup> When asked for his cell phone number, Esparza gave the number of the phone from which the threatening voicemail messages had been generated. He stated he did not know why he made the phone calls to Agent Morris, but that he was tired of being harassed by the police and tired of the "typical police attitude."

Testifying on his own behalf, Esparza acknowledged that he had been in the OTNC gang and used the moniker Devil, and that there was graffiti inside his residence saying "Devil" and "OTNC." However, he stated he stopped his involvement with the OTNC gang in 2002 or 2003 and three other OTNC gang members used the moniker Devil. He acknowledged that the ammunition at his residence belonged to him, but claimed the cell phone was left there by someone else. He claimed that he told Agent Morris he did not know anything about the calls, and that during the police interview the police kept insinuating he made the calls but he did not say anything to them.

IV. DISCUSSION

A. Standard of Review

Title 28, United States Code, § 2254(a), sets forth the following standard of review for federal habeas corpus claims:

The Supreme Court, a Justice thereof, a circuit judge, or a district court shall entertain an application for a writ of habeas corpus in behalf of a person in custody pursuant to the judgment of a State court only on the ground that he is in custody in violation of the Constitution or laws or treaties of the United States.

28 U.S.C. § 2254(a).

The Anti-terrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996 ("AEDPA") amended

1 section 2254 to provide a “highly deferential standard for evaluating state court rulings.”

2 Lindh v. Murphy, 521 U.S. 320 (1997). Under 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d):

3 (d) An application for a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of a person in 4 custody pursuant to the judgment of a State court shall not be granted with 5 respect to any claim that was adjudicated on the merits in State court
6 proceedings unless the adjudication of the claim –

7 (1) resulted in a decision that was contrary to, or involved an 8 unreasonable application of, clearly established Federal law, as 9 determined by the Supreme Court of the United States; or

(2) resulted in a decision that was based on an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the State court proceeding.

10 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1)-(2).

11 To obtain federal habeas relief, Esparza must satisfy either § 2254(d)(1) or 12 § 2254(d)(2). See Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S. 362, 403 (2000). The Supreme Court 13 interprets § 2254(d)(1) as follows:

14 Under the “contrary to” clause, a federal habeas court may grant the writ if 15 the state court arrives at a conclusion opposite to that reached by this 16 Court on a question of law or if the state court decides a case differently 17 than this Court has on a set of materially indistinguishable facts. Under 18 the “unreasonable application” clause, a federal habeas court may grant 19 the writ if the state court identifies the correct governing principle from this 20 Court’s decisions but unreasonably applies that principle to the facts of the 21 prisoner’s case.

22 Williams, 529 U.S. at 412-13; see also Lockyer v. Andrade, 538 U.S. 63, 73-74 (2003).

23 Where there is no reasoned decision from the state’s highest court, the Court
24 “looks through” to the underlying appellate court decision. Ylst v. Nunnemaker, 501 25 U.S. 797, 801-06 (1991). If the dispositive state court order does not “furnish a basis for 26 its reasoning,” federal habeas courts must conduct an independent review of the record
27 to determine whether the state court’s decision is contrary to, or an unreasonable
28 application of, clearly established Supreme Court law. See Himes v. Thompson, 336
F.3d 848, 853 (9th Cir. 2003); Delgado v. Lewis, 223 F.3d 976, 982 (9th Cir. 2000) (overruled on other grounds by Lockyer, 538 U.S. at 75-76). However, a state court need not cite Supreme Court precedent when resolving a habeas corpus claim. Early v.

1 Packer, 537 U.S. 3, 8 (2002). “[S]o long as neither the reasoning nor the result of the 2 state-court decision contradicts [Supreme Court precedent,]” the state court decision will 3 not be “contrary to” clearly established federal law. Id.

4 B. Petitioner’s Full and Fair Opportunity to Litigate His Search and 5 Seizure Claim in State Court Precludes Him from Raising the Issue
6 Again in a Federal Habeas Petition

7 In Ground One of his Petition, Esparza contends that his house was searched
8 and evidence was seized in violation of the Fourth Amendment. (First Am. Pet. at 6.)
9 Specifically, Petitioner argues he “was unlawfully arrested by police without sufficient 10 probable cause and thus, the consent police obtained immediately after petitioner’s 11 arrest was tainted fruit of this illegal arrest.” (Id.) Further, he argues, the observations
12 made by police officers during this initial search were used to obtain the search warrant 13 that was utilized after Petitioner withdrew his consent. (Id.) Esparza asserts that 14 because the search was illegal, any evidence collected in connection therewith should 15 have been suppressed by the trial court, and because the trial court denied the 16 suppression motion, Esparza’s Fourth Amendment rights were violated. (Id.)
17 Respondent contends Petitioner cannot raise his Fourth Amendment claim in a federal 18 habeas corpus petition because he had a full and fair opportunity to litigate the issue in 19 state court. (Resp’t Mem. at 6.)

20 Clearly established federal law provides that “where the State has provided an 21 opportunity for full and fair litigation of a Fourth Amendment claim, a state prisoner may 22 not be granted federal habeas corpus relief on the ground that evidence obtained in an 23 unconstitutional search or seizure was introduced at his trial.” Stone v. Powell, 428 U.S.
24 465, 494 (1976); see also Villafuerte v. Stewart, 111 F.3d 616, 627 (9th Cir. 1997)
25 (finding Villafuerte had full and fair opportunity to litigate in state court and was not 26 entitled to federal habeas relief when he raised his claim in post-conviction proceedings 27 in state court); Gordon v. Duran, 895 F.2d 610, 613 (9th Cir. 1990) (holding Gordon had 28 an opportunity for full and fair litigation of his Fourth Amendment claim in state court even when there was a dispute as to whether Gordon actually litigated that claim).

1 Under Stone, the “relevant inquiry is whether petitioner had the opportunity to 2 litigate his claim, not whether he did in fact do so or even whether the claim was 3 correctly decided.” Ortiz-Sandoval v. Gomez, 81 F.3d 891, 899 (9th Cir. 1996).
4 California Penal Code § 1538.5 specifically allows criminal defendants to move to 5 suppress evidence obtained in violation of the Fourth Amendment. This provision 6 provides criminal defendants with an opportunity for “full and fair litigation” of their 7 Fourth Amendment claims, regardless of whether the criminal defendant litigates the 8 issue. Gordon, 895 F.2d at 613; Cal. Penal Code § 1538.5.

9 Here, Petitioner had ample opportunity in state court for full and fair litigation of 10 his Fourth Amendment search and seizure claim. Petitioner fully exercised his rights 11 under California Penal Code section 1538.5, and before trial moved to suppress all the 12 evidence from the search of his residence. (Lodgment No. 1 at 7-12.) The trial court 13 denied Esparza’s motion on the basis that he gave police consent to search his 14 residence. (Lodgment No. 2, Vol. I at 37-38.) The trial court found, as a result, that the 15 entry into Petitioner’s residence was lawful, the observations therein were lawful, and 16 the subsequent search warrant was lawful. (Id. at 38.) Petitioner then appealed to the 17 California Court of Appeal, which reviewed his claim and, in a reasoned decision, 18 affirmed the trial court’s denial. (Lodgment No. 5 at 5-9.) The appellate court 19 concluded that the record showed “a reasonable ground for the police to believe that 20 Esparza was the person who made the criminal threats.” (Id. at 9.) The court noted the 21 “facts were sufficient to cause a person of ordinary prudence to have a strong suspicion
22 that Esparza was the caller[,]” which established probable cause for Esparza’s arrest
23 and validated the search of his home. (Id.) Therefore, the court concluded, Esparza did 24 not show that the trial court erred in denying the suppression motion. (Id.) Lastly,
25 Petitioner appealed to the California Supreme Court, which denied his petition for review 26 without comment. (Lodgment Nos. 6 & 7.) Petitioner was not only presented with 27 opportunities for a full and fair litigation of his Fourth Amendment claim, but he fully 28 utilized and exhausted his avenues for relief under the state court system.

Petitioner's full and fair opportunity to litigate his illegal search and seizure claim in state court precludes Petitioner from raising the issue again for federal habeas review. See, e.g., Villafuerte, 111 F.3d at 627. Accordingly, this Court recommends habeas relief be denied as to Ground One.

C. The Trial Court did not Err by Allowing Testimony that Petitioner Failed to Deny Accusations and by Instructing the Jury that it Could Conclude that Petitioner Made an Adoptive Admission.

In Ground Two of his Petition, Esparza asserts that the trial court violated his Fifth and Fourteenth Amendment right to remain silent when it admitted testimony that he did not deny that he had made threatening calls to Agent Morris when he was interviewed by authorities. (First Am. Pet. at 7.) Esparza further contends that the trial court violated these rights when the court instructed the jury on adoptive admissions, which provides that if the jury found that Petitioner heard and understood a statement that he would have and could have denied if it were not true, then it could conclude that the defendant admitted the statement was true. (Id.; see also Lodgment No. 1 at 61 (jury instruction on adoptive admissions).)

Petitioner raised this claim in his petition for review filed in the California Supreme Court on direct appeal. (Lodgment No. 6.) That court denied the claim without citation of authority. (Lodgment No. 7.) Accordingly, this Court must "look through" the state supreme court's denial to the state appellate court's opinion as the basis for its analysis. Ylst, 501 U.S. at 801-06. In denying Petitioner's claim that adoptive admissions evidence should not have been admitted at trial, the California Court of Appeal stated:

After Esparza was arrested and waived his Miranda rights, the police questioned him about the voicemail messages on [Agent] Morris's phone. At trial, Officer Evans delineated the various statements made by Esparza during the police interview. Officer Evans testified that during the course of the questioning, Esparza stated he did not know why he made the phone calls but he was tired of being harassed by the police and of the typical police attitude; he referred to himself as the "shot caller" in the voicemail message because Agent Morris had called him this and he did not like the title; and he would love to "kill...or fuck...up" the authorities as he stated in the message but he knew he could not do so. When a detective quoted the portion of the voicemail message stating "get back, or

1 you get shot the fuck back,” Esparza finished the latter portion of the 2 statement in unison with the detective and smiled. Esparza acknowledged
 3 that he had used the moniker Devil and that he had written graffiti stating 4 “OTNC” and “Devil” on the mirror at his residence; however, he claimed he 5 had stopped using the moniker two years earlier when he was released from prison. After Officer Evans presented this testimony regarding Esparza’s statements, the prosecutor asked: “At any time during that interview, did the defendant deny making the calls to Agent Morris?”
 Officer Evans responded, “No.”

6 According to Officer Evans, at one point during the police interview
 7 Esparza stated that “why he had done it was between him and Mr. Morris 8 and he wasn’t going to talk to [the police] about it.” Accordingly, the police 9 summoned Agent Morris to speak with Esparza. Agent Morris testified 10 that he asked Esparza why he had done this because he (Agent Morris) did not deserve it. Esparza agreed that Agent Morris did not deserve it and stated that he (Esparza) was “just being an asshole.” After this testimony, the prosecutor asked if Esparza told Agent Morris that he was not the person who made the calls. Agent Morris responded, “No. He did not deny making the call whatsoever.”

11 The trial court instructed the jury on the principle of adoptive
 12 admissions, telling the jury that if it found “someone made a statement 13 outside of court that accused the defendant of the crime and the 14 defendant did not deny it...[¶]...[¶] [it] may conclude that the defendant admitted the statement was true. (See Judicial Counsel of Cal. Crim. Jury 15 Instns. (2007-2008) CALCRIM No. 357.) In closing argument, the prosecutor asserted that Esparza admitted to the police and to Agent 16 Morris that he left the threatening voicemail messages when he discussed the messages with them. Further, the prosecutor argued that Esparza’s failure to deny making the calls when he was asked about them constituted adoptive admissions.

17 Defense counsel did not object to the evidence, instruction, or 18 argument on adoptive admissions.

19 (Lodgment No. 5 at 10-12.)

20 i. Federal law concerning the use of a criminal defendant’s
 21 silence as inculpatory evidence at trial

22 The Ninth Circuit recently analyzed the inculpatory use at trial of a criminal 23 defendant’s silence during interrogation in Hurd v. Terhune, 619 F.3d 1080 (9th Cir.
 24 2010). The Ninth Circuit reviewed and summarized existing Supreme Court authority as 25 set forth below:

26 In Miranda v. Arizona, the Supreme Court “held that whenever a criminal suspect 27 is subjected to custodial interrogation, he must be warned of his right to remain silent 28 and informed that any statement he makes can be presented as evidence in court.”

1 Hurd, 619 F.3d at 1085 (citing Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436, 444 (1966)). If these
 2 warnings are not given, “the prosecution may not use statements, whether exculpatory
 3 or inculpatory, stemming from custodial interrogation of the defendant.” Id. (citing 4 Miranda, 384 U.S. at 444). “The Court also indicated that a suspect may rely on his
 5 right to remain silent selectively: ‘The mere fact that [the suspect] may have answered 6 some questions or volunteered some statements on his own does not deprive him of the 7 right to refrain from answering any further inquiries until he has consulted with an 8 attorney and thereafter consents to be questioned.” Id. at 1085-86 (quoting Miranda, 9 384 U.S. at 445) (emphasis added).<sup>1</sup>

10 In U.S. v. Doyle, “[t]he [Supreme] Court explained that a criminal defendant’s 11 reliance on his right to remain silent may not be used against him in any way at trial, 12 including for impeachment.” Id. at 1086 (citing U.S. v. Doyle, 426 U.S. 610, 618-19
 13 (1976) (emphasis added). “The Court reasoned that Miranda warnings make a 14 suspect’s silence ‘insolubly ambiguous’ because that silence could be ‘nothing more 15 than [an] exercise of these Miranda rights.” Id. (quoting Doyle, 426 U.S. at 617).

16 In Anderson v. Charles, “the Court held that while Doyle ‘prohibits impeachment 17 on the basis of a defendant’s silence,’ it does not ‘apply to cross-examination that 18 merely inquires into prior inconsistent statements.” Id. (quoting Anderson v. Charles, 19 447 U.S. 404, 407-08 (1980)). “The Court explained that ‘a defendant who voluntarily 20 speaks after receiving Miranda warnings has not been induced to remain silent. As to 21 the subject matter of his statements, the defendant has not remained silent at all.” Id.

23 <sup>1</sup>Respondent cites People v. Hurd, 62 Cal. App. 4th 1084 (2008), in his Answer.
 24 In that case, the California Court of Appeal held that a “defendant has no right to remain 25 silent selectively. Once a defendant elects to speak after receiving a Miranda warning, 26 his or her refusal to answer questions may be used for impeachment purposes absent 27 any indication that such refusal is an invocation of Miranda rights.” Id. at 1093. This 28 was held to be an erroneous application of Miranda and was overruled by the Ninth Circuit in Hurd v. Terhune, 619 F.3d 1080 (9th Cir. 2010). As noted below, however, the distinction is moot because the record demonstrates that Petitioner failed to remain silent in this case.

1 (citing Anderson, 447 U.S. at 408).

2 “The Supreme Court has clearly established that, after receiving Miranda
3 warnings, a suspect may invoke his right to silence at any time during questioning 4 and that his silence cannot be used against him at trial, even for impeachment.” Id. at 5 1087 (citing Miranda, 384 U.S. at 473-74; Doyle, 426 U.S. at 618-19) (emphasis added).

6 ii. Analysis

7 As the California Court of Appeal observed,

8 The Anderson rule permitting impeachment based on a defendant's
9 failure to reveal information during a voluntary police interview applies 10 here to permit the adoptive admissions evidence. Esparza was not 11 induced to remain silent, and then his silence used against him at trial.
12 Nor do the circumstances indicate that Esparza was relying on his 13 Miranda rights to refuse to answer some questions. . . . Rather, according 14 to the prosecution's witnesses, Esparza waived his right to remain silent, 15 voluntarily discussed the phone calls with the authorities, and during this 16 discussion never denied that he made the phone calls. Because Esparza 17 did not expressly or impliedly invoke his right to remain silent during the 18 police interview, there was no constitutional barrier to the prosecution's
19 presentation of adoptive admissions evidence arising from his responses 20 during the interview.

21 (Lodgment No. 5 at 14.)

22 Petitioner neither relied on, nor invoked his right to remain silent. There is 23 nothing in the record from either the San Diego Superior Court or the California Court of 24 Appeal that shows or even suggests that Petitioner ever indicated that he wished to 25 remain silent or otherwise exercise his rights under Miranda and the Fifth and 26 Fourteenth Amendments. Rather, there is evidence showing that Petitioner did not 27 remain silent in response to any question presented to him during his interrogation.
28 There was evidence presented at trial that Petitioner gave some verbal response to every question asked. Only once during the trial was any evidence presented that Petitioner remained silent in response to any interrogation, when Petitioner testified that during the interrogation “[he] would just sit there and say nothing to them.” But this testimony was flatly refuted by the testimony of Detective Evans and by Petitioner's own testimony. (See Lodgment No. 2, Vol. III at 174-79, 208-09.) On direct examination, Detective Evans testified as follows:

1 Q. Now, after searching the residence, what's the next thing you did?

2 A. Mr. Esparza was taken to San Diego Police Department to be 3 processed.

4 Q. Okay. Did you obtain a statement from him at the San Diego Police 5 Department?

6 A. Yes, I did.

7 Q. And prior to talking to him, did you read him his Miranda rights?

8 A. Yes.

9 . . .

10 Q. And did the defendant agree to give up those rights and speak with 11 you?

12 A. Yes, he did.

13 Q. Okay. What did he tell you?

14 A. He told me that the marijuana and the glass pipe belonged to him.
15 He said he had found the rounds of ammunition a few weeks prior 16 to our contact at a friend's house. That friend told him he could 17 keep the rounds. [¶] When we started speaking about the phone 18 calls made to Mr. Morris, I asked him why the phone calls were 19 made, and he said that they were made, it didn't matter why.

20 Q. Okay. Did you ask the defendant who Devil was?

21 A. Yes.

22 Q. And what did he tell you?

23 A. He told me it was a moniker that he used two years prior - - that he 24 stopped using two years prior when he got out of prison.

25 Q. Okay. What did he tell you with respect to the house on "D" 26 Avenue?

27 A. He told me he had been living there since January.

28 . . .

Q. Now, you testified a minute ago that you talked to the defendant about the phone calls made to Agent Morris and that he said, "the phone call was made, it doesn't matter why." [¶] Were those the words he used?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he say anything else with respect to the phone calls made to Agent Morris?

1 A. Yeah. He told us that he had referred to himself as the shot caller 2 in the phone calls because Agent Morris had referred to him that 3 way when he was paroled out of prison and he didn't like that. He 4 told us that he didn't know why he had made the phone calls. He told us he wasn't under the influence of any alcohol or narcotics.
 He said he had been frustrated with being treated poorly by law enforcement in general.

5 Q. Did he say he was "tired of being harassed by the police"?

6 A. Yes, basically.

7 Q. Did he say he was "tired of the typical police attitude"?

8 A. Right.

9 . . .

10 Q. Did Detective Bernier confront the defendant about the statements 11 that were left on Agent Morris's voicemail?

12 A. Yes, he did.

13 Q. What did the defendant say about those?

14 A. He said he didn't remember everything he said. Detective Bernier told him he had said, "I don't know whether to" . . .

15 . . .

16 "I don't know whether to kill you guys or just fuck you up." And after 17 he said that Esparza said, "I'd like to do that but I know I can't."

18 . . .

19 Q. And did Detective Bernier confront the defendant with any other statements that were made in the voicemails?

20 A. Yeah. There was one more statement. He said - - Detective 21 Bernier told him he said, I don't know - - he said, "get back or get 22 shot the fuck back." And as Detective Bernier finished that sentence saying, "shot the fuck back," Mr. Esparza finished it with him in unison and a smile on his face.

23 (Lodgment No. 2, Vol. III at 174-79.)

24 On direct examination, Petitioner testified as follows:

25 Q. And once you got down to the central jail, where were you taken?

26 A. They had - - they sat me down and they tried to interview me.

27 Q. You use the word "tried" to interview you, what do you mean by 28 that?

1 A. Well, they kept insinuating that I was the one that made the phone
2 calls. So I just - - I would just sit there and say nothing to them.

3 Q. And how long did that last?

4 A. They had me out there for maybe about 20 minutes.

5 . . .

6 Q. So during the entire time they were trying to interview you outside,
7 you didn't say anything?

8 A. Yeah, I did.

9 Q. And what was that?

10 A. I believe I told them that it didn't matter why the call was made, 11 either way I was under arrest or I was the one that was 12 disrespected for whoever made the phone call.

13 Q. So when you made that statement, what were you responding to?

14 A. To them saying why did I call him.

15 (Lodgment No. 2, Vol. III at 208-09.)

16 As the Ninth Circuit pointed out in Hurd, under the Supreme Court's rulings in 17 Miranda, Doyle, and Anderson, a criminal defendant's silence cannot be used to either 18 inculcate or exculpate the defendant at trial. Here, however, Petitioner did not remain 19 silent, and therefore the adoptive admission instruction given to the jury was 20 appropriate.

21 The rationale behind the limitation on the use of a criminal defendant's silence 22 against him at trial is that, after being given Miranda warnings, a defendant's silence is 23 so ambiguous that using that silence to prove facts at trial would be inappropriate.
24 Doyle, 426 U.S. at 617 ("Silence in the wake of these warnings may be nothing more 25 than the arrestee's exercise of these Miranda rights. Thus, every post-arrest silence is 26 insolubly ambiguous because of what the State is required to advise the person 27 arrested."). If Petitioner had remained silent when asked whether he made the 28 threatening phone calls, it would have been simply unclear whether the defendant was acknowledging his guilt through adoptive admission or exercising his right to remain silent. However, when Petitioner verbally responded to questioning, this ambiguity

1 disappeared. When Petitioner verbally responded to every question presented to him, 2 but failed to deny any accusations, it was clear that he was not invoking his right to 3 remain silent under Miranda because he did not, in fact, remain silent.

4 Because Petitioner did not remain silent and failed to deny the accusations 5 against him, his failure to deny the accusations was properly admitted as evidence of an 6 adoptive admission and an instruction on adoptive admissions was properly given to the 7 jury. When a suspect fails to remain silent after being given Miranda warnings,
 8 whatever he says can be used against him at trial. See Miranda, 384 U.S. at 444;
 9 Doyle, 426 U.S. at 617; Anderson, 447 U.S. at 404.

10 iii. If evidence of Petitioner's adoptive admission was error, it was 11 harmless beyond a reasonable doubt.

12 Assuming, arguendo, that the trial court's admission of evidence of Petitioner's
 13 failure to deny accusations, and subsequent jury instruction on adoptive admissions 14 was error, that error was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. The evidence of 15 Petitioner's guilt was overwhelming. See Allen v. Woodford, 395 F.3d 979, 992 (9th Cir.
 16 2005), cert denied, 546 U.S. 858 (2005) ("[T]o the extent that any claim of error . . .
 17 might be meritorious, we would reject that error as harmless because the evidence of 18 [Petitioner's] guilt is overwhelming.").

19 As the California Court of Appeal noted:

20 According to Officer Evans's testimony, during the police 21 interrogation Esparza made repeated statements indicating that he did, in 22 fact, leave messages on Morris's voicemail – i.e., stating he did not know 23 why he made the phone calls, explaining why he called himself the "shot 24 caller," stating that he would like to kill or assault the authorities as he 25 threatened in the message, and repeating a portion of the message as 26 quoted by the detective. . . . Additionally, the record contains compelling evidence of guilt based on the discovery of the cell phone used to call Agent Morris at Esparza's residence; the observation of gang-related graffiti at Esparza's residence consistent with the caller's identification of himself as Devil from OTNC; the evidence that Esparza was an OTNC gang member who used the moniker Devil; and the preexisting relationship between Agent Morris and Esparza.

27 (Lodgment No. 5 at 16.)

28 There is ample and persuasive evidence of Petitioner's guilt irrespective of any evidence of adoptive admission. Viewing the record as a whole, there is no reasonable possibility the jury's verdict would have been different had the evidence of Petitioner's adoptive admission been excluded. The admission of the evidence of adoptive admission did not "so fatally infect[ ] the proceedings as to render them fundamentally unfair[ ]" because the evidence of Petitioner's guilt was overwhelming. See Jammal v. Van de Kamp, 926 F.2d 918, 919 (9th Cir. 1991). Therefore, even if the admission of this evidence was improper, it was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. See id.

D. The Admission of the Gang Expert's Opinion Testimony does not Present a Cognizable Claim for Federal Habeas Relief

Petitioner argues in Ground Three of the First Amended Petition that the trial court's admission of the testimony of the prosecution's gang expert violated his constitutional right to due process. (First Am. Pet. at 8.) Specifically, Petitioner asserts that the trial court erred by allowing the expert to give his opinion as to the "ultimate issue" in the case when he testified that it was his belief that Petitioner made threatening phone calls to Agent Morris to benefit a criminal street gang. (Id.; see also Lodgment No. 2, Vol. III at 129-30.) Petitioner contends that, as a result, the true findings on the gang enhancements should be reversed. (First Am. Pet. at 8.)

The Ninth Circuit has stated:

[E]vidence erroneously admitted warrants habeas relief only when it results in the denial of a fundamentally fair trial in violation of the right to due process. See Estelle v. McGuire, 502 U.S. 62, 67-68 [ ] (1991). Federal habeas courts do not review questions of state evidentiary law. Id. Our habeas powers do not allow us to vacate a conviction "based on a belief that the trial judge incorrectly interpreted the California Evidence Code in ruling" on the admissibility of evidence. Id. at 72[ ]. With regard to expert testimony, we recently noted that we have found no cases "support[ing] the general proposition that the Constitution is violated by the admission of expert testimony concerning an ultimate issue to be resolved by the trier of fact." Moses v. Payne, 543 F.3d 1090, 1105 (9th Cir. 2008). "Although '[a] witness is not permitted to give a direct opinion about the defendant's guilt or innocence ... an expert may otherwise testify regarding even an ultimate issue to be resolved by the trier of fact.'" Id. at 1106 (quoting United States v. Lockett, 919 F.2d 585, 590 (9th Cir. 1990) (alteration in original)). We found this "not surprising," id., in light of the well-established rule permitting opinion testimony on ultimate issues[.] [S]ee Hangarter v. Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co., 373 F.3d 998, 1016 (9th Cir. 2004).

2 Briceno v. Scribner, 555 F.3d 1069, 1077-78 (9th Cir. 2009).

3 Because there is no clearly established constitutional right to be free of an 4 expert opinion on an ultimate issue, it cannot be said that the admission of the 5 prosecution gang expert's opinion was contrary to, or an unreasonable
6 application of, Supreme Court precedent.

7 E. The Attorney General is not a Proper Respondent and Should 8 be Dismissed

9 Petitioner has improperly named J. Brown, the Attorney General of the 10 State of California, as a respondent in this action. Rule 2 of the Rules following § 11 2254 provides that the state officer having custody of the petitioner shall be 12 named as respondent. Rule 2(a), 28 U.S.C. foll. § 2254. Only if the petitioner is 13 not yet in custody pursuant to the state-court judgment being contested should 14 both the officer having present custody of the petitioner and the attorney general
15 of the state in which the judgment was entered be named as respondents. Rule 16 2(b), 28 U.S.C. foll. § 2254.

17 Here, there is no basis for Petitioner to have named the Attorney General 18 as a respondent in this action. Therefore, the Court recommends that the 19 Attorney General of the State of California be dismissed as a named respondent 20 from this action.

21 V. CONCLUSION AND RECOMMENDATION

22 Having reviewed the matter, the undersigned recommends that 23 Petitioner's Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus be DENIED. This report and 24 recommendation is submitted to the Honorable M. James Lorenz, the United 25 States District Judge assigned to this case, pursuant to the provisions of 28
26 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1).
